

WHAT TIME IS IT? - GIANT CLOCK

An unlimited amount of children may play the game. This game can be played two ways. The first, each child can take turns and using their arms to point to the correct numbers to tell the time that the other players tell them.

The second is for one child to stand in the center of the clock and the rest of the players up to twelve to stand by a number on the outside of the clock. The player in the center will shout out a time. The two players standing by the corresponding numbers will move around the clock quickly (clockwise) to the other position. The last player to get to their new position will move to the center and the center player to the outside.

This will teach the children how to tell time on a traditional clock, while increasing a child's coordination and agility.
